Victoria Ade-Genschow

Founder, Editor-in-Chief & Socio-Political Expert – The British Berliner

Victoria Ade-Genschow is the Founder and Editor-in-Chief of the highly successful travel expat lifestyle website about a British girl from Manchester living in Berlin with her German husband and her son.

Victoria used to live in the Czech Republic and after an exciting stint in Hong Kong, moved to Germany as a British expat.

As a result of the business acumen she obtained in Eastern Europe & the UK, she took on the role of School Headship and Management at the Wall Street Institute in Berlin. In 2018, Victoria became the Corporate Training Manager for an Engineering /Information Technology company.

Outside of her website, she also works as a British-German socio-political expert who has been featured in various European documentaries and major European publications such as the BBC, Bild am Sonntag, Der Tagesspiegel, British Shorts Film Festival, the Humboldt University (Berlin), the Huffington Post, etc. and is a regular contributor to the European Culture TV and German radio stations, as the local expert on Europe, the British monarchy and Brexit!

Over the years Victoria has travelled far and wide and has been to 69+ countries and 5 continents! Her motto: "If I can do it, so can you!"

16–18 October 2020 – Arena Berlin

Panel Discussion

Join this heartening and forward-looking discussion focused on destinations around Europe. A four-person panel of passionate travel experts will share insights about how destinations and the travel world cope with and react to the pandemic.

The panel will also consider current tourist needs and behaviors and what travelers should consider when trip planning. Looking to the future, the experts will share insights on how they expect travel to change for the better in a post-pandemic world.

The panelists include:

Kash Bhattacharya (travel blogger & author, BudgetTraveller) with insights into destinations in Germany and the Czech Republic, which he's recently visited.

Victoria Ade-Genschow (socio-political expert, founder & editor-in-chief, The British Berliner) will discuss travel safety and the future of travel post-corona.

Markéta Chaloupková (director, CzechTourism Germany) will offer details about how the Czech Republic has adapted to the current situation and how this has changed it as a destination.

Jan Sadowsky (managing director, Green Tiny Houses) will share Tiny Houses' concept – and how it might just be the perfect, sustainable destination at this moment.
